Discussion — Our Hanukkah

Hanukkah has been celebrated by Jews worldwide throughout the generations. You can discuss your own Hanukkah family traditions – Do you have any special customs? Are they similar to the Hanukkah customs commonn in Alaska? Have you ever celebrated Hanukkah in an unusual situation or extraordinary location?

Spreading light inside and out

This book can inspire you to take an evening stroll and look at the lights around you: the stars, moon, street lights, and perhaps even the menorahs that others have lit – how many lights do you see? For every source of light you discovere outside, mention one thing that makes you happy, stronger, or spreads the light in your life.

Hanukkah Anywhere in the World

Where would you like to light Hanukkah candles today? Somewhere special in Israel? How about in snowy Alaska? You can make a world map and play an amusing game in which you pretend to light Hanukkah candles in a different location each day! What can you see around you? What will you be eating besides latkes and doughnuts? Which local customs will you incorporate into your holiday?

The northern lights

You can look at the illustrations in this book and be inspired by them to use magic markers and colored pencils to make your own dazzling aurora.
