Friendship and Self-Image

A discussion on Noah's emotional experience will reveal what evokes empathy and interest in your child. You can ask: In your opinion, how did Noah the Chick feel when his friends told him he would fail? In your opinion, why did he help his friends despite having been offended by them? Did you believe he would succeed?

Illustrations Tell the Story

Raaya Karas' colorful illustrations are full of expression and action. You can suggest to your child that he/she leaf through the book without reading it. and then look at the illustrations and tell the story in their own words.

Small but Capable

And what can you do? Inspired by Noah the Chick, you can enhance your child's sense of competence by preparing a family chore chart together in which everyone helps, and the "little ones" do big-boy/girl chores too.

מִשְׂחָק

If anyone can do it, it's Noah the Chick!

Inspired by Noah's challenging journey to the top of the mountain, you can assemble various "obstacle courses" using pieces of furniture, blankets, and pillows. While attempting to complete them, cheer your children on by shouting: If anyone can do it, it’s Noah the Chick!
