A discussion on imagining together

Children love to play “make believe”. They enjoy pretending that they are grown up: “Driving” a car, making mud “cakes”, or playing with an imaginary friend. You can play this game with your child using a prop, such as a doll, pot, or toy car, and ask: Where are we going? What are we cooking together? What is the doll saying?

Arts & Crafts — My reflection in the water

Would you like to make a reflection? Like the one we see in a puddle? Scan the QR code and get inspired to make a simple piece of artwork.

A Game of "Almost the Same"

Ron sees Shluli in the puddle, but, in fact, it is his own reflection in the water. You could also play a game of "mirror" in which two players face one another and take turns pulling a face, moving their head or leg, and having the other imitate them.

Jumping into puddles

Are there any puddles outside yet? How about pulling on your boots, getting dressed warmly, and heading outside to jump into puddles? If that's not possible, you can always make a "puddle" from rope or paper, and jump in and out as much as you like.
