קְרִיאָה

Family reading advice — From book to life

Books can help us cope with challenging situations: Toddlers identify with book characters and, as a result, learn about emotions, behaviors and challenges that exist both in books and in real life. In situations that are similar to those presented in the book, you can remind your toddlers of the book characters, and suggest that they be inspired by them and behave in a similar way: "Do you think we can maybe shift a little on the bench, and make room for our friends, just like the bears in the book did?"

שִׂיחָה

מה קורה בסיפור?

You can discuss what is happening in the book with your toddlers – which problem did the bears encounter? Why didn't the bear have anywhere to sit? What did the other bears do? You can also address the feelings that emerge from the book: How did the bear feel when he had nowhere to sit? Was he happy, sad, or perhaps surprised or confused?

מִשְׂחָק

Reading the illustrations

You can learn, play, and have fun using the illustrations. You can look for a different detail in them every time – can you spot the pink bear? Where's the spotted bear? Where is the big bear and where is the little bear?
You can swap roles, and let your toddlers beckon you to search for details in the illustrations.

כְּלָלִי

Like a bear

You can turn the pages of this book and pause at a different page each time to look at the bears and try to copy their movement, sitting posture, and facial expressions so that yours are exactly like the ones depicted in the illustration.
