Continue activities following the story – Berale Berale What's in the Basket?

By: Pnina Kass
Illustrations: Ora Ayal
הוֹצָאָה: כתר
Age Group: Daycare (2-3)

קְרִיאָה

Family reading advice — Books everywhere

Like many toddlers, Berale also asks Grandma – "What are we going to do now?". Among the surprises Grandma keeps in her basket is a book that they can read whenever they want. A book is a world unto itself that can be taken anywhere quite easily. You can also keep a book in your bag, and enjoy it while waiting for a doctor's appointment, relaxing in the park, or taking a long car ride.

שִׂיחָה

Discussion — Special times with loved ones

You can discuss your toddler's relationship with Grandpa, Grandma, or other significant family members and ask – What do you enjoy doing together? Are there any special activities that you only do with your grandparents or uncles and aunts? Are there any special items that only they have at home?

יְצִירָה

A made-up story

Grandma's stories make Berale laugh because they are made-up, and unusual things can happen in our imaginations. Try making up your own story, like "The Hippo that Fell into a Soup Bowl", "The Lion Who Was Afraid of Being Left Alone at Night", or any other idea that comes to mind. You can start with an object you see around you, and take it from there.

מִשְׂחָק

Grandma baked a cake...

Do you know the fingerplay that accompanies the nursery rhyme “Round and Round the Garden”? Or the Israeli version “Savta Bishla Dasya” (“Grandma made some porridge”)? You can play a similar game by bending your fingers inwards and leaving your thumb out to create a ‘snail’. Your toddler’s upturned palm can be the bowl. Now say: “Grandma and Berale baked a cake. They added flour, they added sugar, they added eggs...” while touching your toddler’s upturned palm with your thumb as you name each ingredient. You can take turns being Berale and the mixing bowl.

הַעֲשָׂרָה

Pinterest

For more ideas and surprises, check out the Sifriyat Pijama Pinterest page.

