קְרִיאָה

Family reading advice — Recurring phrases
Many books written for toddlers have a recurring phrase that helps their target audience follow the story and join in the reading. The recurring phrase can be emphasized while reading using a special voice, body movement, or a change of reading pace. For example, when you read bo itanu ("come with us"), you can add an inviting hand gesture, or make the end of the phrase longer – veyesh etzlenu m-a-k-o-m ("and we have r-o-o-m").

שִׂיחָה

Hosting friends

The girl in this book invites the children to join her under her umbrella and “hosts” them. You can ask the children whether they like to host at home, and who they would like to host.

Sometimes toddlers find it hard to share their games when they host others at their homes. You can discuss that and explain that, just as the umbrella in the book is still the girl’s umbrella, even when she allows others to take cover under it, so do their personal belongings remain theirs when sharing.

שְׁמַע

Listen to the Song

You can listen to the song as sung on Kan Kids’ children’s show Parpar Nechmad, and join in the singing as well as the dance movements.

Lyrics and music: Datia Ben Dor

Performing Artists: Ester Rada, Uri Banai, Meital Raz, Ami Weinberg.

מִשְׂחָק

A family with an umbrella

How many family members can fit under a single umbrella? And how many can fit under a blanket? Or the dining-room table? This book can inspire you to find out how well you can all squeeze into various places in amusing and fun ways.

לָצֵאת הַחוּצָה

A walk in the rain

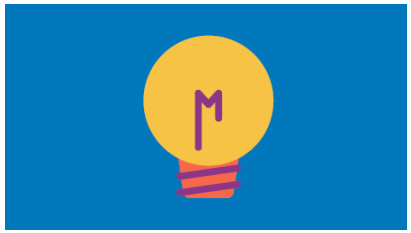

On a rainy day, you can pull on some boots, put on a coat, take an umbrella and go out for a walk in the rain! You can step into puddles and observe the special things that change around us when it's raining – How many people are outside now? What do the skies look like? What happens when the rain falls on soil or the sidewalk? What kind of smell is in the air?
